Good News: Oil Spill does not extend to Bay of Bengal

Oil spill

CHENNAI
Sagar Sandesh News BUREAU

There is no impact of the Oil spill from the Chennai Petroleum Corporation's refinery in the aftermath of last week's cyclone in Bay of Bengal according to an official release based on the assessment the coastguards

No oil spill was found extending into sea thereafter as the flood water outflow into the sea through Kosathalaiyar river was less and the oil got trapped inside the creek area which are being responded by the contractors.

Coast Guard has been providing necessary expert advise to Chennai Petroleum Corporation and Tamil Nadu Pollution control board for necessary assessment, cleaning and recovery of spilt oil from the Ennore creek area.

ICG ships and helicopters have been continuously monitoring the situation and it is confirmed that there is nil egress of oil slick into the coastal area.

Oil spill mixed with drain/flood waters were observed in Ernavur, Chennai area which made its way till Ennore creek and Buckingham canal in the aftermath of cyclone Michaung.

Traces of Oil were also seen in the coastal waters close to Kosathalaiyar river mouth on December 10th. The extent of oil spill was spread to 20 Sq km area which was light sheen to dark brown in color and was estimated to be approximately 10 tons as per standard method of Spill quantity calculation.

The spill in the coastal waters was immediately responded by Coast Guard ships and helicopters on December 10 appropriately neutralized.

Indian warships are shadowing the hijacked vessel as it reaches Somalia coast

Bulk carrier MV Ruen

CHENNAI
Sagar Sandesh News BUREAU

Indian warship shadowing the hijacked Malta flagged MV Ruen commercial vessel is into a "wait-and-watch" mode since a direct intervention could lead to loss of lives among the crew being held hostage by the armed pirates on board The hijacked vessel has since reached the Somalia coast its destination on December 17th.

Bulk carrier MV Ruen is being "constantly monitored" by Indian guided-missile destroyer INS Kochi. "The two warships are present in the area for any contingency," an officer said.

Going by past instances, owners of such hijacked commercial ships are usually compelled to negotiate with the Somali pirates and pay a ransom to get their vessels and crews back.

"Armed interventions are normally avoided in such hostage situations. Indian Navy had swung into action after MV Ruen, with 18 crew members on board, sent a mayday call on the UKMTO portal on Thursday afternoon, with the alert that it had been boarded by "around six unknown persons".

MV Ruen, is managed by a Bulgarian company Navigation Bulgare. The hijacking is the first major incident in the last five to six years after concerted anti-piracy action by several international navies in Gulf of Aden and Indian Ocean Region.
